Lewis and Morgan Land District Doubles Title

George L. Lewis and Dudley D. Morgan yesterday won the District title in the men's doubles in the twenty-eighth annual tournament played on the courts of the Dumbarton Club, with Louis I. Doyle and Capt. J. M. Hancock as runners-up. The scores were 6-2, 7-5, 6-7 and 6-2.

Lewis and Morgan showed some exceptional team work and both looked to be particularly strong overhead. As a matter of fact, they counted most of their points on beautiful overhead smashes which their opponents could either not touch at all or could not handle with any degree of certainty when they got to them. Their service, too, was above the ordinary and the Doyle-Hancock combination managed to break through on very few occasions. Round and these two are scheduled to play at 2 o'clock.

The card for the doubles final match follows:

Thomas Blows in Seventh And Jungaleers Win, 6 to 5

Nationals Are Beaten by Jennings' Tigers in First of Final Series.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.—After playing dead before the shots of Washington's rookie southpaw spitball artist, Thomas, for six innings, during which the Nationals piled up a comfortable lead, the Tigers went crazy again today. Before they came to earth the score was 6 to 5, and the Jungaleers were on the long end. Washington has yet to win a game on Detroit soil this year.

On the face of the returns, Clyde Milan was responsible for the failure of the Nationals to grab the first engine. As a matter of fact, Thomas himself must shoulder the blame. Up to the seventh Thomas had allowed only two hits, both of these coming in the fourth, with no one out, and clever hurling by the younger retired the side without further advance around the bases. But four men of Jennings' had reached first, and only two had explored the region about second. If ever a game seemed cinched it was this one. Even after the outbreak in the seventh, the score was all Washington, for in the first of the eighth two runs were added to the Griffith total of three.

The seventh started with a triple to center from Veach. Crawford fled to Smith way back to the screen, and Veach ran home after the catch. Hellman got a rousing single to center, but died stealing, when Henry threw him out. So far Harry didn't slide. On the next ball pitched Young smote a line drive to center that baffled Milan. Clyde danced a jib without running anywhere, and by the time he had sized up the situation the missile was sailing over his head just out of reach. It went for a home run. Stanage tripled to center in the same round, but was stranded when pinch-hitter Burns fouled to Henry.

This lusty bombardment unnerved Thomas, who also seemed to be annoyed by the continual playing of a band in the stands. After two were out in the eighth he walked Cobb and Veach, and grooved one for Crawford. Sam leaped on the apple for a triple to right, and two more tallies counted.

Meanwhile, Mitchell had been roughly used by the Nationals. They threatened in the second, when a single to center by Smith and a pitched ball in the slats for Sam Rice, who got back into the game today, plus a wild heave to second by Mitchell, put runners on base and drove in a hit and run play, sending Judge to third. McBride stole as Henry fanned, and Stanage's throw went to center field, permitting Judge to trot home.

More good baseball snaggled another run in the fifth. Foster walked and cleared to third on a hit and run, while Mitchell was throwing out Milan. Smith's double to left scored Eddie. McBride's triple to left center and Henry's single to right brought another tally in the sixth. After Detroit had made two in the seventh, Washington added another pair to the Griffith total. Boland had replaced Mitchell. Rice beat out an infield hit, but was forced by Judge. McBride walked and Henry bunted safely, silling the sacks. A single by Thomas and a sacrifice fly by Leonard brought in the counters. The clubs entered the ninth inning with the score 5 to 4, in favor of Washington. Cunningham replaced Boland, and retired the visitors scoreless by aid of a double play, after Milan had singled and Smith had sacrificed. Young started the ninth with a slashing single to left. Stanage bunted and Thomas threw wild to second in an endeavor to force Young. Dubuc batted for Cunningham and was passed.

Meantime Ayers relieved Thomas and grooved the first ball. Vitt smacked it against McBride's shins so hard the horsehide galloped to center field, and Young and Fuller, who was running for Stanage, brought in the tying and winning runs.
